FRANK E. LANGLEY, Publisher

Theodore-sit-by-the-telephone is his name.

If misfortunes travel in "threes," Great Britain might as well brace herself for the third and last.

Why not appoint a neutral commission to go over and see if the dreadnought Wasp was sunk or not?

Remembering Kitchener, those 5,000,000 soldiers—or what is left of them—ought to fight all the harder when once they get into the fray.

Every little backwoods town in Maine and New Hampshire has blossomed out into a summer resort, judging by the advertisements of Squag Hollow, etc., in some of the city papers.

The esteemed Concord Monitor ends an editorial with the following growl: ton-u-s lu(E-groug) and we suspect there is something the matter with the contemporary's liver.

In view of the splendid record of victories by the Tufts college baseball team, some league magnate might take over the team intact and substitute it for his own assortment of unsorted ball players.

Charles E. Hughes' only public utterance since he was forced to become a presidential candidate indicates that he is strong in his Americanism, although not so vehement about it as Theodore Roosevelt. There is no doubt that he is "straight American."

If more people should attend the Greater Vermont association's annual meeting in Montpelier next month than Montpelier's hotels could accommodate, the overflow could be cared for at Barre. Perhaps some of the guests may prefer to stay in Barre anyway.

Besides its "war" in Mexico, the United States has something approaching a war in Santo Domingo, where American marines sent ashore to preserve order are being attacked by rebels. The latest report of hostilities tells of some slaughter among the rebels and none among the Americans. Thus in a small way the United States forces are going through a course of training.

Those "Keep to the right" signs are needed again at several points on Barre streets. The signs performed a very effective service last summer, and the failure to place them in position this year is resulting in some confusion of traffic and may permit some serious accident. The particular place where they are most needed is at the junction of Main, Washington and Elm streets. There the vehicles are getting out of the habit of staying on the right side of the road.

We agree in part with the Montpelier Argus that a large part of the big news of the world is "breaking" for the afternoon newspapers rather than for the morning editions. However, we hardly think that large part amounts to nine-tenths, as the contemporary states. The two biggest events of the past week first appeared in the afternoon papers of the United States, those events being the British-German naval battle off Jutland and the death of Kitchener in the sinking of the cruiser Hampshire. The Times, like all the afternoon papers, was able to give the news to its readers 12 hours ahead of the morning papers to their readers and, indeed, as far as the local field was concerned, from 18 to 24 hours ahead of the morning papers.

A Scranton, Pa., newspaper has raised the price of a single issue from one cent to two cents, the reason advanced being the increased cost of materials because of the great war. The owner of that newspaper had ample reason for taking that position because materials used in the construction of a newspaper have gone up largely since the outbreak of the hostilities; and it costs the publisher a great deal more nowadays to get out his paper than it did two years ago. Many publishers have taken the only alternative to the plan adopted by the Scranton man and have curtailed their expenses in some minor details to meet the increase in the cost of materials, while at the same time not sacrificing the quality of newspaper turned out. Still other publishers were perhaps unable to curtail

ESPIONAGE.

The British government authorities should immediately begin a searching investigation to determine, if possible, whether a German system of espionage is still in operation in Great Britain to a considerable extent. The whole British nation knew nothing about Kitchener's movement and supposed he was still at his desk in the war office until the news of his death was submitted. Even the press agent of the war office did not know that Kitchener had left England; yet, as it now seems probable, a German submarine commander knew that Kitchener had left England, knew that he was going in a northerly direction and knew which course he would take. This is, of course, predicated on the assumption that it was a torpedo, rather than a mine, which destroyed the cruiser Hampshire bearing the head of the British war office. If it was a mine that did the work, then too much emphasis is being placed on the German inside information. But it is reasonable to assume, in view of previous instances of advance knowledge possessed by the Germans, that their system of espionage was at the bottom of this most recent thrust at British prestige. The British have been for years too trusting, just as the people of the United States have been too trusting. We in the United States are suffering the consequences of that trustfulness although still at peace, just as Great Britain is suffering the consequences in war. It is not in the nature of the British and the Americans to be ultra-suspicious. Oftentimes that lack works to their disadvantage.

GOETHALS WOULD RETIRE.

He Reiterates to Secretary Baker His Desire to Return to Private Life.

Washington, June 8.—Major General George W. Goethals, governor of the canal zone, conferred Tuesday with Secretary Baker, and is understood to have reiterated his desire to retire to private life. Secretary Baker declined to discuss that feature of the conference. He probably will present the general's request to President Wilson within a few days.

The general applied for retirement recently but when the slides occurred he withdrew the application and assumed direction of the repair work. It is understood his present request is conditioned upon the wish of President Wilson, and should the general be asked to continue in service, he will comply willingly.

This is the patented Victor "goose-neck" sound-box tube which enables the Victor Needle to follow the record grooves with unerring accuracy.

It is a metal connection, perfectly flexible in every vibration, between the sound-box and tapering tone-arm.

And in this flexibility is its superiority over every other sound-box connection.

How can a jeweled point or any other reproducing point stiffly held by a rigid sound-box pick up and convert the more delicate tones? It can't and doesn't.

But with the Victor flexible "goose-neck" sound-box tube it is different.

This flexibility gives a freedom of motion which enables the Victor Needle to pick up every particle of tone of even the most complex chord, no matter how minute it may be, and convert it into a perfect flood of music in exact accord with the artist's interpretation.

Come in and hear the Victrola and see the Victor "goose-neck" sound-box tube in action and you will clearly understand its advantages; hear all the soft beautiful tones which are "saved" by this important exclusive Victor feature.

Victrolas $15 to $300. Victors $10 to $100.

Terms to suit your convenience, if desired.

ROAD BONDING
PLAN FAILED

to D. J. Sullivan's inquiry, Mr. Lee of the engineering department stated that the cost of the bridge construction, without the paving, would be slightly in excess of the $14,000 mentioned in the joint estimate. Chairman Glysson later explained how the two jobs could be done cheaper at a single sitting. V. E. Ayers thought that the first grade crossing to be eliminated would be the crossing just south of the bridge, a move which would achieve the elimination of Jockey Hollow hill.

In a few words, Rev. J. B. Reardon paved the way for the succeeding speaker by requesting that a resolution prepared by the chairman of the street committee be read. The resolution, which would empower the council to float a bond issue of $48,000 over a period of eight years in order to finance the paving and bridge project, was presented by Mr. Glysson. D. J. Sullivan and C. R. Varum spoke briefly and then balloting began on the resolution, printed slips inscribed, "For Bonding," and "Against Bonding," as required by statute, having been distributed. The same tellers were asked to serve.

After the ballots had been counted, Chairman Howland announced that the resolution had been lost by a vote of 123 to 118. A motion to dismiss article 3, relating to the manner of issuing bonds and wholly contingent upon the first article, was hurriedly carried and under article 4, a motion to adjourn prevailed.

BODY FOUND HANGING.

George F. Brackett, 79, Killed Himself at Brattleboro.

Brattleboro, June 8.—The body of George Fletcher Brackett, aged 79 years, was found yesterday at 3:30 o'clock hanging by a rope from a beam in a barn on Front street. The building was unused except for storage purposes. Mr. Brackett, who had been missing from the home of his son, Alonzo, since morning, was dependent because of continued ill health and inability to work. Mr. Brackett was born in Green River and until seven years ago conducted a farm there. He lived with a daughter in New Jersey six years and last fall came to Brattleboro. THE VAUGHAN STORE

TALK OF THE TOWN

Will the finder Monday evening of the $10 bill, rolled in an old handkerchief, please leave same at The Times office and receive reward? Property of an aged lady.—adv.

Karl Lane purchased at auction yesterday the house, barn and lot at the corner of Highland avenue and Washington streets, known as the Emory place. The consideration was $5,000.

Silas Dady, who has been passing several days with friends in the city, returned to-day to Waterbury, where he has charge of the shoe making department at the state hospital.

Look! Just arrived, a shipment of waists to sell for only $1 and $1.25. The kind that gives you the dressy appearance. Come in and make your selection. Mrs. W. F. Shepard, Howland block.

L. H. Hayden of Shelburne Falls, Mass., arrived in the city last evening to make his home here. Mr. Hayden, who is a shoemaker of wide experience, has been engaged to take charge of the repair department of the Tilden Shoe Co. and began his duties to-day.

Under the supervision of Manager Gordon of Jersey City, N. J., the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. opened a store in the Miles building yesterday, the company having leased the quarters vacated a few weeks ago by E. M. Lyon. It is stated that the concern operates a chain of 2,300 stores throughout the United States and Canada and that 30 or more stores are located in Vermont. The company plans to open a second store in Barre within a short time.

Barre Hebrews, in common with others of their race throughout the world, are observing the Jewish Pentecost of Feast of the Weeks (Shavuoth). The observance began last evening at sundown and will continue until to-night. The name of the feast is derived from the fact that it is celebrated seven weeks after the second day of the Passover. When the reform synagogue introduced the rite of confirmation for the Jewish youth, the Pentecost, by virtue of its traditional association with ancient laws, was the day most naturally selected for charging the young boys and girls, through an impressive public ceremony, with the meaning of the Jewish faith and with the duty of living a religious and moral life.

Abraham Cerasoli pleaded guilty to a breach of the peace offense when arraigned before Magistrate H. W. Scott in city court this morning and paid a $5 fine and costs amounting to $8.11. The respondent was taken in custody by Chief Sinclair on a complaint made to Grand Juror William Wishart, who represented the state at the hearing to-day. It was alleged by the authorities that trouble in a local stone shed led to the detention of Cerasoli, who was charged with striking Joseph Charbonneau with a hammer. A disagreement over the handling of a derick precipitated a war of words that ended seriously for Charbonneau, according to the police.
